

RESOURCES FOR TEENAGERS & THEIR FAMILIES

ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Our 4-day Conference is the best way to help teenagers overcome the challenge of stuttering. Activities, motivational speakers, support from other teens and adults who stutter, and much, much more!

TEENS WHO STUTTER (TWST)

Our local TwST chapters bring teens together for support and encouragement. Help them to know they are not alone.

FAMILY VOICES NEWSLETTER

A publication created for kids and teens who stutter, their parents, speech-language pathologists (SLPs), and others who support them. Special sections of Family Voices are written for and by teens, kids, and parents. Articles address the issues of connecting, advocacy, resources, and education. School-age children, teens, and their parents can learn how to cope with stuttering from each other.

PARENT SUPPORT CHAIN

Connect with other parents through our NSA Parents Facebook Group who have faced the challenge of being the parent of a child who stutters. Search 'NSA Parents' on Facebook.

ASK THE EXPERT

Have your questions about stuttering answered by top stuttering specialists and leaders in the stuttering self-help community. With the NSA's many outreach programs for teenagers who stutter and their families, you are not alone. Contact us today!

AskTheExpert@WeStutter.org

Phone: 800-We-Stutter

Email: info@WeStutter.org

Web: WeStutter.org

When teenagers stutter, they experience challenges typically not faced by their peers. Fortunately, there are many ways that you and others can help.

Working with leading stuttering specialists, the NSA has prepared this "Top 10" list of helpful steps you can take to support your teen through this important time.

By following these recommendations, you will build a solid foundation for helping your teenager face his or her stuttering, and you will give your child the best opportunity for minimizing stuttering and improving his or her communication skills.

As you try these suggestions, remember that you and your child do not have to face stuttering alone. The NSA is here to help!

The NSA is the largest self-help and support organization in the world for children and adults who stutter and their families. Through our family programs, we have dedicated ourselves to providing parents and families with the knowledge, understanding, and hope they need to support children's success in their speech and throughout their lives.

The National Stuttering Association is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization. Since 1977, we have dedicated ourselves to bringing hope and empowerment to children and adults who stutter, their families, and professionals through support, education, advocacy and research.

Copyright © 2013. All Rights Reserved.

National Stuttering Association

119 W. 40th Street, 14th Floor, New York, NY 10018

Phone: 800-937-8888 | Fax: 212-944-8244

Email: info@WeStutter.org | Website: WeStutter.org

HELPING TEENS WHO STUTTER

THERE ARE MANY THINGS YOU CAN DO TO HELP, THESE ARE JUST OUR TOP 10

1. LEARN ABOUT STUTTERING

Getting the facts about stuttering can help you to understand what your child is going through. The NSA has partnered with leading specialists to provide the most up-to-date information about stuttering research and treatment. The more you know, the more you can help.

2. TALK WITH YOUR TEEN

To the extent that she is comfortable, talk openly with your teen about stuttering. Keeping communication open creates an atmosphere of trust and sharing between you and your teen. Open communication helps your teen know that she can talk to you about how she feels about stuttering, and this helps her know that she is not alone in dealing with her speech.

3. EMPOWER YOUR TEEN

Through your acceptance and trust in your teenager, you can create opportunities for him to believe in himself. By empowering your teenager to become an independent problem solver, he can grow more confident in his own skills to deal with stuttering throughout his life.

4. YOUR NEW ROLE

Teenagers who stutter continue to need their parents, however, what they need from you will change as they make the transition from being a dependent child to becoming an independent adult. More and more, decisions such as whether or how they will manage their speech are up to them. You can become a source of advice and opinion, but you can no longer expect your child to work on his speech simply because you want him to. Your support for your teen's choices, whether or not they would be your choices, is key for creating an atmosphere of trust and responsibility.

5. CHOOSE THE RIGHT THERAPY

Fortunately, many treatments are available for teens who stutter. Unfortunately, not all of these treatments are helpful for all children. Seek the advice of a speechlanguage pathologist (SLP) who specializes in the treatment of teens who stutter and work closely with your therapist to ensure the best possible outcome for your child. If you need help locating a specialist, contact the NSA and we can help you find someone in your area.

FIND 'WESTUTTER' ON

6. ACCEPTANCE

Stuttering is a small part of who your teen is, and an even smaller part of who she will become. Stuttering does not have to limit her life—the key to success is acceptance. You can help your teen face this challenge by showing that your love and acceptance are unconditional, regardless of how fluently she speaks. In particular, your acceptance of the way your teen chooses to manage her speech during this transitional time will help to provide a supportive atmosphere. Denial and avoidance give power to stuttering; acceptance and open interaction are positive and productive.

7. RELEASE OWNERSHIP

Remember that your teenager is responsible for his own speech. As he becomes an adult, he will need to feel this responsibility for himself, while knowing that he has your support and encouragement. This is true regardless of how he chooses to address his stuttering.

8. UNEXPECTED CHANGES

Change is never easy, and it takes time, but with effort and persistence, it does happen. As your teen moves through adolescence, you will find that his or her motivation and ability to manage stuttering may become either increased or decreased. Remember that these fluctuations are a normal part of dealing with stuttering in the teen years. Try to view these challenges as opportunities to encourage your teenager towards success, without expecting him to face his stuttering the same way you might. Embrace these times of transition, for they create new possibilities for you and your teenager to work together and grow together.

9. PATHS TO SUCCESS

Evaluate what the goals of therapy are and what is considered "success". You can stutter and be a good communicator just as a fluent person can be a poor communicator! The objective of good stuttering therapy should be to increase the fluency and the effectiveness of your communication, not necessarily to make you 100% fluent.

10. GET CONNECTED

The NSA is dedicated to providing hope, empowerment, and support for you and your child. Through the NSA, you will become part of a community of people who understand stuttering and how to help people who stutter.

The greatest gift you can give yourself and your child is the knowledge that you are not alone in dealing with stuttering!